Marco:

I just received sample results from the first quarterly performance samples collected since start up of the ART remediation system at one of our sites. As compared to baseline samples, performance sample results show significant reduction in contaminant concentrations in the majority of wells sampled. One of the factors considered in remedy selection was that the ART system costs were hundreds of thousands of dollars less than other technologies identified for the site.

Even though the system has only operated for a few months, the results are very promising. I look forward to the next round of performance samples and will forward to you.

Sincerely,

Garry Phillips
